Congress meets to-day (Monday) and as the saying goes, "let us hope for the best and prepare for the worst."

The silver dollars are making more friends than ever. Nearly 500,000 were distributed last week, being twice as many as were circulated for the corresponding time last year.

Sara Bernhardt has closed her engagement in New York. She played twenty-four times and receipts were $98,000. She next goes to Boston, where already reserved seats to the amount of $50,000 have been sold.

The Milwaukee Sunday Telegraph says that Senator Quarles, of Kenosha, who is among the ablest and most eloquent members of the Senate, has announced his intention to support E. W. Keyes for United States Senator.

About all that the Democrats in Congress have done for the last four years, is to make blunders. They will have three months more of rule in the House and Senate, and that is all, and let us see if they will be profited by the teachings of the recent election.

There is still another enterprise on foot by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company, and this is to build a line from Elgin to Elkhorn, through Geneva Lake. This will be a useful road, and it shows that this great corporation proposes to extend its lines wherever the business interests of the country demand it.

There is to be a morning Republican paper in Milwaukee, and the necessary capital of $100,000 has been raised. The principal contributors are Colonel E. H. Brodhead of the First National bank; C. D. Nash, of the National Exchange bank; Samuel Marshall, of the firm of Marshall & Ilsley; John H. Tweedy, Col. I. M. Bean, Daniel L. Wells, W. P. McLaren, Judge A. C. May, Charles Ray, C. L. Colby, F. N. Finney, Horace Rublee, and Dr. Kane. It is understood that Horace Rublee will be editor-in-chief, and Dr. Kane managing editor. This movement grows out of the opposition to the Sentinel. That paper has been very unreliable for sometime. It has been used, to a large extent, as a weapon to thrash Mr. Murphy's personal enemies, and a good many others against whom he had some petty spite. The Republicans of Milwaukee got tired of this kind of journalism, and concluded to have a change. Under the editorial management of Mr. Horace Rublee and Dr. Kane, the paper will probably be ably and judiciously managed.

The great Fontaine locomotive was tried on the Detroit and Bay City road last Friday, drawing four passenger coaches, and about 200 prominent railway officials and business men. The engine was not put to a thorough test on account of the numerous sharp curves and heavy grades. But at times when a fair piece of road was reached the engine ran at the rate of 55 to 58 miles an hour. With no cars behind it, the locomotive made one mile in forty-five minutes. It is claimed that when the newness is worn off, and the engine gets in good running order, a much higher speed will be attained. On the same road, a few years ago, the distance of 111 miles was made in 100 minutes, when Bishop Borgess was carried from St. Thomas to Amhersburg. But the point to be gained is general speed over all parts of the road and with heavy trains. At first it was claimed that the Fontaine engine would be able to draw a heavy train of freight cars at the rate of 75 miles an hour, and with less consumption of fuel than with the ordinary engine. It is doubtful if Mr. Fontaine can make an engine that will do the amount of work which he predicts can be done by a single locomotive.

Congress met at noon to-day and the President's message was received and read. It is a long document, and contains nothing of more than ordinary importance. He gives Secretary Sherman a sound endorsement, for the skill with which he has managed the finances of the government. He also chants the praises of Secretary Schurz, and is justified in doing this, as Mr. Schurz has made an admirable Secretary of the Interior. During the past three years the President has had his eyes opened in regard to the actual condition of things in the South, and therefore reprobates the course of the Southern leaders in terms that would do honor to the most stalwart Republican in the North. He does not forget to denounce polygamy, and calls it a national disgrace for so large a community to live in open defiance of morality and the laws of the United States. The President shows his antagonism to the present silver dollar by advising that the forty millions, or thereabouts, be recoined with sufficient alloy put in them to bring them to gold par. He also believes in setting aside the remaining public lands to create a fund for educating the illiterate of all classes. He wants the Indians to take care of themselves, and to accomplish this, he believes in the policy of the interior department of educating the tribes.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAMS AND THE SENATORIAL QUESTION.

Hon. Charles G. Williams, of this city, passed through Chicago on Friday, on his way to Washington, and while halting at the Grand Pacific hotel, was interviewed by a representative of the Tribune on the Wisconsin Senatorial question and the policy of General Garfield's administration. The reporter prefaced the interview by the following fitting tribute to Mr. Williams:

"Undoubtedly the foremost man in the Republican party of Wisconsin to-day is the Hon. Charles G. Williams, Representative in Congress from the First District. His fine oratorical abilities made him prominent in politics twenty years ago, and his scholastic and legal attainments, added to a moral character of the highest tone, endeared him long ago to one of the most intelligent constituencies in the West. They believe in the well-worn adage, "When you get a good thing, keep it;" and the Republicans of the grand old First District seem to be acting upon it, as they have just elected Mr. Williams to the Forty-seventh Congress by a majority of over 7,000. They say that they could easily have made his majority 10,000, but that they didn't want to utterly discourage their Democratic neighbors. As it is, "Clint" Babbitt, the Democratic candidate against Williams, has begged the newspapers to return his vote as "scattering," and not put a head on it with the use of his name.

After giving a brief account of the valuable services Mr Williams rendered in the canvass, the Tribune representative asked:

"Mr. Williams, there seems to be an exciting contest going on in your State over the election of a United States Senator, will you be kind enough to tell me how it stands up to the present time?"

To which he answered:

"I will tell you all I know, but I suppose that you newspaper men whose business it is to find out everything in advance, know much more about it than I do. It is true that I was about the State a good deal during the last campaign, and spoke in nearly all the principal cities; but the question of the Senatorship was not much discussed in my hearing, and it was only occasionally that it was made an issue in the election of a member of the Legislature. I understand that it was made a test in some instances in Mr. Sawyer's own district, where the Republicans are solid for him; but I think generally the matter was held in abeyance. Mr Cameron's term of service will expire on the 3d of next March, and the members elect of the next Legislature that meets in January are charged with the duty of electing his successor. It has always been the custom in Wisconsin to have a free-for-all race when there was a United States Senator to elect, —no Republican State convention ever having called to consider the question,—but public sentiment, aided by political ambition of the aspirants themselves, generally made certain men prominent candidates before the Legislature assembled. That is the condition of affairs at the present time. Mr. Keyes was a prominent candidate two years ago, when Senator Howe's term of office expired, and has been working for it ever since. Last February, Mr. Sawyer visited Madison when the Legislature was in session, and openly announced himself a candidate for Senator. Public sentiment seems to be dividing and crystalizing between these two gentlemen, and so it looks as if one or the other of them would be chosen."

"Who seems to be ahead in the race thus far?"

"That is a question that I cannot answer. I understand that the friends of both claim that their favorite is ahead. The Republican majority this year is 103, which is large and unwieldy, and it is probable that some of the members have not yet declared for either candidate."

"I saw you and Mr. Sawyer dining together. Am I to infer from that that you favor Mr. Sawyer's candidacy?"

"Not at all. I am personally friendly with both Keyes and Sawyer. If Mr. Keyes had been here he would have been invited to join us at dinner also. They are both good Republicans, and my friends."

"How do the members stand in your district?"

"I don't know positively in regard to all of them. The members in Rock county, where I reside, refuse to commit themselves in favor of either candidate. They are honest, intelligent men, and will not fail to follow the dominant sentiment of the county when the time comes."

In regard to the question of Congressman Pound, of this State, going into President Garfield's cabinet, Mr. Williams said there had been such a rumor, but there had been no consultation among the Republican members from Wisconsin on that subject, but answering for himself he said he would heartily support Mr. Pound, if it should meet with the approbation of his colleagues, as he thought it would.

As to the policy of President Garfield toward the South, Mr. Williams thought it would be the question the next administration would have to deal with. He thought Garfield was too broad a man, was too high-minded, and had a nicer sense of justice than to repeat the folly of President Hayes. He says Garfield has the clearest conception of our Republican system of any man he ever knew, and will discharge the great obligation the people of the United States have laid upon him.

A NEW TRIAL DENIED.

EAU CLAIRE, Dec. 5.—The application of young Chase, of this county, for a new trial has been denied by the supreme court, and the desperado is likely to spend the remainder of his days behind the bars. Chase is the person who beat Frank Goodwin, of Chippewa Falls, to death, and who came nearly being lynched after the occurrence.

AMERICAN OYSTERS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The 1,500,000 American oysters, writes a German correspondent, which were planted in the little belt last spring, were inspected, a short time ago, and found in fine growing condition. Within four months they gained an inch in circumference, and a German professor of zoology gives assurance that for the purpose of oyster-growing it cannot be excelled. It has now been determined to construct basins where young oysters will be protected from polypes and star fish, and to plant in these basins four or five millions of American oysters.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The earnings of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad company for the last six months has been over eleven million dollars.

CONGRESS.

Special to the Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—SENATE—Vice President Wheeler called the Senate to order at precisely 12 o'clock. Prayer was offered by Chaplain Bullock. New members, Hugh, of Alabama, and Brown, of Georgia, were sworn in. The credentials of Edmunds were placed on file. A recess of fifteen minutes was taken, to notify the President. The message was then read. The gallery was not crowded. Many desks contained floral favors.

HOUSE. Two hundred and twenty-six members answered their names. Vacant seat of Garfield and others adorned with flowers. House did not wait for message but proceeded to business.

Calkins, of Indiana, introduced a resolution to investigate illegal banking.

SPOILED BOURBON PLANS.

Several Investigations That Will Not be Heard of Again—The Minnesota and Indiana Election Cases Consigned to Oblivion.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 5.—The result of the Presidential election has had a blighting effect upon some of the investigations and contested election controversies which were begun by the Democrats in the House. The contests of Donnelly against Washburn, and McCabe against Orth, which had been carried to such a point that a partisan decision in each could easily have been reached at the coming session, will probably vex the House no more. If the Electoral College had been very evenly divided the Democrats could have secured the vote of the delegation from Minnesota by giving Washburn's seat to Donnelly; and the vote of the Indiana delegation could have been taken out of the power of De La Matyr, and made Democratic, by unseating Orth and putting McCabe in his place. There are many reasons for believing that at least one of those cases would have been so decided at the coming session if the vote of November 2, had been so close as to leave any chance for throwing the election of President into the House. By means of these changes the Democrats would have secured the vote of the House by States, and escaped any necessity for relying upon the vote of De La Matyr, which would have decided the political character of Indiana's delegation. As the House now stands, by voting with the Republicans De La Matyr can give them a majority on a vote by States, and by voting with the Democrats can make a vote by States a tie, and thus throw a decision of an electoral question into a Democratic Senate. But the election of Garfield and Arthur is so decisive that now there will be no use for such miserable tactics. Both Orth and Washburn have been returned to the Forty-seventh Congress by clear majorities, and De La Matyr will be free to turn his attention to the pulpit after March 4th. Among the little investigations which will probably pass quietly into oblivion is the one in relation to Commissioner Le Due and the Agricultural Bureau, begun at the instigation of members who probably felt that they had been deeply wronged in the matter of seeds and the like. It is not expected here that the committee will ever make a report.

THE SITUATION.

WASHINGTON, Dec., 5—Senators and members of both parties have been moving around very freely to-day, conversing on the political situation generally and the prospects of the session, which commences to-morrow. The drift of the talk and comment is mostly quiet and conservative, and there seems no good reason why the session shall not begin and end without any unpleasant occurrences and incidents. There is, however, the not very remote contingency that gentlemen like Mr. Blaine in the Senate and Mr. Conger in the House, in the exultation of party triumph, may not care to restrain their natural propensities to rasp their political opponents, and that, on the other hand, some of the injudicious and hot-tempered fellows on the Democratic side, who kept a padlock on their mouths during the whole of the last session because a Presidential election was pending, will now take a grim satisfaction of unbosoming themselves and talking exactly as they feel. If these two elements once lock horns, the contest will most likely be kept up till the last hours of the session, in which event it will be lively enough.

OSHKOSH.

The Funeral Services of the Victims of the Beckwith House Fire.

OSHKOSH, Dec. 5—The funeral of Mrs. Simon B. Page, one of the victims of the Beckwith house fire, took place to-day from Trinity Episcopal church, of which she was a member. Although the day was bitterly cold a large number of people attended, and many were suffused in tears during the impressive service. The remains were enclosed in a beautiful casket of black satin with mountings of silver. The pall bearers had black satin badges fringed with gold. The bodies of George Wood and Mollie Hanrahan have not been recovered. The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Peter's Catholic church met to-day and made provisions for the waiter girls and chamber-maids who lost their effects.

Fears are entertained to-day on account of the high wind for the north wall of the hotel, which still stands, and parties who occupied buildings in close proxmity did not venture to remain.

The various losses will be adjusted by the insurance companies this week.

Funeral services in commemoration of the dead were held in nearly all the churches to-day.

A traveling salesman, Schoenman, supposed to have been burned to death with the others, was found to be safe. A telegram from Berlin last evening announced he was on his way to Milwaukee.

IRELAND.

Immense Land League Meetings Held Yesterday.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—There was an immense Land League demonstration at Waterford Sunday. Parnell was presented with an address of welcome by the corporation. A procession, which included various societies, with horsemen, escorted Parnell to the place of meeting. Houses and ships were decorated with flags, and the streets triumphantly arched. Four hundred police, one hundred cavalry and two hundred infantry were drafted for the town. The speeches were of the usual character. Several other meetings were held in Ireland Sunday.

BERNHARDT'S SUCCESS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The financial success of the engagement of Mdlle. Bernhardt has been thus far greater even than the managers hoped for. During the four weeks of her stay in this city, which ended last night, the receipts were $808,-942, an average of over $3,957 per night.

I have suffered from a kidney difficulty for the past ten years, accompanied with nervous spasms. Physician gave me but temporary relief, but after using three and one-half bottles of Warners' Safe Kidney and Liver cure, my nervous spasms were entirely relieved. My age is 77 years. I recommend this great remedy to all suffering from nervous troubles. MRS. MARY REESE.

SAVING AN HOUR'S SLEEP.

A Bloomfield Man's Invention Which He Thinks Might Prevent Some Divorces.

From the New York Sun.

A man living near Bloomfield, N. J., has contrived an arrangement by the use of which he is enabled to get an hour or more of extra sleep in the morning, and in other ways he finds it of great benefit. In many ways it takes the place of a domestic servant. The gentleman has thought out and put into practical working an idea that occured to him about a year ago. He is awakened in the morning by a shrill whistle. He at once gets out of bed, for he knows what that whistle means. It tells him that all is ready for him to get breakfast. He dresses and goes into the kitchen, and there he finds a bright, fresh fire, a teakettle full of boiling water, and other conveniences for preparing his morning meal. All this is accomplished by means of an alarm clock with weights, a piece of wire, a sheet of sandpaper and some matches. Paper, wood and and coal are put into the grate of his cooking-stove, and a teakettle filled with water, and having a tiny whistle fitted into the nozzle of the kettle, is placed on the stove. By setting the alarm in the clock, he can have a fire at any time he wishes. When the alarm in the clock goes off, a weight falls and lets the wire, the wire moves and scrapes the matches fastened to it on the sandpaper; the matches light the paper in the stove, the paper fires the wood and coal, and soon a fire is under way. In a little while the water in the teakettle boils, and the whistle gives the note of warning that everything is ready and it is time to get up.

"Simple thing, and yet what a comfort it is," the inventor says. "There is no getting up for me now an hour before breakfast, losing that amount of sleep, and then waiting around for breakfast. The arrangement costs next to nothing, and it is as trustworthy as anything in this world. I have not had it patented yet. Some persons advise me to, and perhaps I may. I haven't any for sale; got it up entirely for my own comfort and convenience, and it has more than repaid me already. But just think if it were in general use it would save many hard words and do away with considerable domestic unhappiness among poor people. Doubtless it might have a tendency to make a better feeling between some men and their wives, by settling the vexing question as to who should get up in the morning and build the fire. Out of this question alone many divorce suits grow, and this arrangement would prevent them.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 6

A Boy's Meditation on the Death of a Playmate.

I HEARD that Sanford H. was sick; next that he was very sick; then that he was dead! When the boy is well and out every day playing with you; flying kites, making dirt-pies, bragging about his father and telling those shadowy, puffy legends about things he knows nothing of—something like older people, as, for instance, that the star at the comet's head is to fall week after next and set the earth on fire, and you go home terribly frightened and at last muster up sufficient courage to ask the opinion of your parents in reference to the matter, and they restore your confidence in the eternal stability of things by pooh-poohing at such nonsense, albeit your mother an hour ago was also alarmed at reading in the paper the eternal and seven-yearly recurring prediction of the gloomy German astronomer that the earth is circling like a moth round and round, nearer and nearer to the sun, and is eventually to fall into it and be shriveled up like a bit of tissue paper, while your father, as he absently swallows his tea, is internally cogitating over the possibility foreshadowed by a French savan that the earth is gradually receding from the sun, and in the course of 500,000 centuries will be cooled to a globe of ice. While all this is going on, and the boy is merely your barefooted, every-day playfellow, he seems near, familiar and compassable in your thoughts. But sickness comes; the boy disappears. You hear talk of lung or scarlet fever. You see his father on the street with a grave, anxious look. You behold the vehicle which so often seems to precede the hearse, the doctor's carriage, standing at the door. For days the boy's case is the subject for breakfast and supper gossip. At night you pass the house; there is that light in the upper windows. You know he is there, struggling with something dreadful; and so many are thinking of him—nurses, friends, relatives, the doctor. So much is being done for him; yet he grows worse and worse. It is through all this that the boy, as you think of him, becomes something very different from the every-day boy with whom you have played; something sad, solemn, mysterious—something you may not explain, but only feel. The cloud hangs over everything; over the house where he lies; over his empty seat in the school-room; over the very marbles you won from him.

They tell you he is dead! The cloud deepens and blackens. It is now the more terrible for you to think in unspoken words that these grown-up men and women, these people who have to you seemed so powerful, who speak with so much confidence and authority, who, had they deemed you of sufficient importance to come and tell you that Sanford H. would get well, you would have held as oracles infallible. It is dreadful for you to begin to realize how powerless they are to avert death! Such were my feelings throughout the sickness and at the death of Sanford H. The infant school to which I belonged must attend his funeral in a body. I was dressed for the occasion. There was no pleasure in being so arrayed. I would rather have strayed in the woods by myself than have attended that funeral. There, I should have thought a great deal of the dead boy. They would have been sad, but not gloomy thoughts. The funeral was dreadfully solemn, of course, with the rustling and shuffling of people as they came in; the long, silent pause before the service commenced; the coffin on the parlor table; the smell of varnish; and above all, the awful—yes, I must say it—the awful voice of the minister as he delivered the funeral discourse—a discourse which for days after made the sunshine black and all life a dreary passage through an endless graveyard. Then we were told to take our last look. It was the first corpse I had ever seen. So white! And all this to go on about him and he so indifferent and motionless, save those lifeless tremblings as the people crowded and pressed about the coffin. All the wonder, and dread, and mystery, and speculation of grown-up men and women about death are also felt by the child. Only it fears and feels and is silent. Some boys a little older than we acted as pall-bearers. They bore the coffin on a bier to the family vault. It seemed to me a dreadful responsibility. They carried it down the steps and disappeared at the black entrance. When they came out the bier was empty. All that metal ornamentation, the embroidered shroud and satin pillows and flowers to be left there! Our infant school was marshaled in line and we were led away. But my thought long remained behind with that white and silent boy, lying in his coffin in that dark, damp place. I could hear there the dripping of the water drops seeping through the roof, the rustling of foul living things as they moved about the charnel house, and still through winter and summer as the grass growing green then withering, the snows whitening the ground and melting away again, the flowers coming and the birds singing, still in the dark, silent vault below I staid with the white, motionless mystery which once talked and smiled on me.—Prentice Mulford.

Underdraining with Stone.

WHEN made of stone underdrains not only last for all time, but carry off any surface water much sooner than tile. In cutting a ditch for a drain, the most expeditious way is to first run a furrow with a two-horse plow, as straight as possible, where the drain is to be, and on this first furrow backfurrow another of equal width. Then, after shoveling to one side the earth of which this double furrow is composed, repeat the plowing and shoveling by attaching a short chain between the doubletree and clevis, to increase the distance between the two, and thus cause the plow to run the required depth. By this means, i. e., by repeated plowing and shoveling out, a depth of from fifteen to twenty inches may be obtained, and of the proper width the drain is to be. This much done, hitch the two horses, one in front of the other (tandem fashion), to a single-coulter plow, with which rip up the subsoil and throw out as before—repeating the operation until the proper depth is had.

In finishing the bottom of the intended drain, care should be taken to have it of uniform smoothness throughout its entire length, only sufficiently inclining toward the mouth to cause the water to flow with equal freedom through every part of the drain; otherwise little depressions will be left in the bottom of the drain, in which sediment will accumulate to such an extent as to obstruct the free passage of the water, and thus choke up the drain and render it useless.

The next thing then is to prepare the stone for constructing the drain, and which—after being hauled in piles all along the side of the intended drain—should be broken into pieces not larger than goose eggs, the smaller ones to take their place in the bottom of the drain and the larger ones to be thrown in promiscuously until within a foot or so of the surface, and covering the same with a few leaves from the woods, to fill the balance of the drain with the excavated earth.

Where low places occur in the field, on which water is inclined to stand so as to interfere with their cultivation, and for which no outlet can be conveniently had by means of a drain, a very good substitute will be found by digging a hole through the clay some three or four feet in diameter, filling the same with stone to within a few inches of the top, and covering with leaves and earth as above directed. By this means the water will find a ready outlet and perfect drainage will be secured.—Baltimore Sun.

Simple Household Art.

IN nothing has our age shown more rapid progress than in household decoration and the desire to make our daily life beautiful. Not in any respect is the change more striking than in the increased love for rich and bright colors, and appreciations of their glowing harmonies. Formerly, only the wealthy and highly cultivated evinced such tastes, and the middle or lower classes either chose the gaudiest and most glaring mixture of hues, or clung to sober drabs and grays and somber blacks as most genteel. Now, every eye is being subtly trained by the patient teaching and the open scroll of Nature through the flower garden. Even the narrow window-ledge has space enough for the boxes of geraniums—a dazzling mass of scarlet and green almost as radiant as the light that nourishes the blossoms into perfection.

The side of an old fence will support an airy and light tapestry of swinging morning-glories, white, purple and rose-colored. The kitchen gardens glow with the velvety splendors of nasturtiums, or the soberer and more delicate borders of thyme and parsley and other low-growing herbs for scent and savor.

One of the visitors at the White Sulphur Springs last year went often in her rambles to the poor homes in the neighborhood, trying to interest the people in the cultivation of beautiful flowers, and doubtless in one or two more years the fruits of her kindly lessons will be richly evident. Indeed, one need only visit a market stall with its prettily-arranged vegetables, the crisp, green lettuce, the crimson radishes, the silvery white onions placed side by side, to see how far the delight in color has spread and grown. In-doors the change is seen in the rich, dark colors of the stained floors, and the more artistic designs of even the least expensive carpeting. There is an appreciable saving of time and labor also in the oiled or stained floors, which can be so easily kept clean.

If one is not able to afford the money for the purchase of center carpets or rugs, they can be manufactured with the exercise of a little taste and industry. First of all, a strong foundation of coarse cloth—a coffee or salt-bag or some such strong material is needed. Then the colors should be chosen and the pattern carefully drawn off before the work is begun. The outside border is prettiest of crimson, as the red lights up the room and contrasts beautifully with the dark floor. Then dark-gray and black as a background (so to speak) to the brighter colors, and a narrow line of buff running between the two will often light up a pattern charmingly. The softer rugs are made of strips of flannel or cloth cut in narrow pieces three or four inches long, stitched through the middle, and both ends turned over, leaving a fluffy, thick surface, pleasant to the tread of tired feet. This is a very simple household art, but if it makes home beautiful, it is worth much.

Perhaps the daintiest arts of embroidery and panel-painting may scarcely touch the affections as much as that homeliest but indescribable air of comfort and welcome which some very simple rooms may wear. It is like a smile of joy on a plain face, brightening it into positive attraction.

It is astonishing when one once begins the work of making home beautiful how constantly material may be found for accomplishing it. Scraps of bright or dark-colored clothes, tiny pictures, almost anything can be used. From the world of wood and meadows one may gather at will a rich store of mosses and ferns and scarlet berries for all sorts of rare, picturesque grouping. Then it is always safe to trust Nature with the delicate traceries and intermingling of tint and color and finer shade. By living much out-doors one learns unconsciously the secrets of these, although it may be impossible to render a reason; the hands will grow more skillful, the eye and ear truer to all that is beautiful.—Cor. Rural New Yorker.

The Roup.

FANNIE FIELD in the Prairie Farmer says; Roup is a disease among poultry, and, with the exception of cholera, one of the most fatal diseases that the poultry breeder has to contend with; and I have always thought that one-half of the so-called chicken cholera was nothing more or less than roup.

Roup is caused by ill-ventilated houses, crowding too many fowls in one building; filthy drinking water; damp houses, and wet, swampy yards, poor feeding, and the ravages of lice, which so enfeeble the fowls' systems that they are unable to resist disease. No doubt there are other causes which combine to produce this malady, but whatever the causes may be, it is quite certain that if you allow this insidious disease to get a foothold among your flock it will spread with alarming rapidity, and unless you check it in its course your fowls will disappear before its march by twos and by threes, by sixes and sevens, by dozens and twenties, and the places that knew them once will know them no more.

Like a great many of the diseases which affect fowls, and render the life of the inexperienced poultry breeder one of constant anxiety, roup can be prevented a great deal easier than it can be cured. The preventives are obvious. Clean, dry, well-ventilated houses, so arranged that the fowls will not be exposed to drafts; pure drinking water; well drained yards and a sufficient quantity of proper food.

Usually the first symptom of roup is hoarseness and sneezing, as if the fowl was trying to blow its nose; the eyes and nostrils soon discharge a thin, watery substance, which gradually thickens as the disease develops, until it is thick and white, like the matter from a boil, and smells bad enough to knock a man down. As the disease progresses, the head swells, sometimes pustules form around the eyes, and one or both eyes are closed; the comb turns dark, almost black; the fowl appears sluggish, wastes away, breathes with difficulty, and finally "keels up" and dies.

The Mysterious Stranger.

MY attention has very recently been called to a stranger who seems to be a feature of the great mountain exodus. He wears a Mexican sombrero, broad at the base and shallow of crown, with "strange, wild fancies," as Colonel Downey would say, worked in scarlet and gold upon it, and a gold cord with cardinal tassels of great size. His coat is a long buckskin garment, cut plain like a night shirt, with beads worked all over it, and buckskin strings attached to it along the seams and around the tail. He has other odd, wild toggery about him, and seems to feel disappointed because he hasn't killed anybody for an hour or two.

When the passenger train from the East comes in he stands at the depot with a far-away look, like one whose thoughts are roaming among the ranks of grass-grown graves in his own private cemetery, where he plants those who do not love him.

The passengers look at him with solemn awe and respect and do not speak to him, because they are afraid they will disturb him and make him irritated, and he will put a six-flush on the train and mix up a ghastly array of mutilated corpses.

No one seemed to know who this man was at first. Some said it was the left-wing of the James boys. Others, still, said that it was a cut-throat known as "The Howling Demon of Pappoose Canon." The old frontiersman said that it was "The Wild-Eyed Man Flattener from Stinking Water." Others said they recognized him as "The Sanguinary Gizzard-Eater of Yuba Dam."

But he was none of these noted characters.

The citizens called a convention and decided that they would draw lots to see who should hold an interview with him and find out if there was any way by which we could alleviate his woe and ease the canker which was eating away his heartstrings. It was decided that the people of Wyoming should let him have a man to kill, if that was the secret of his consuming grief, and, rather than see him pining his young life away, a victim would be provided for him each week at least.

The bloody task of interviewing this wholesale and retail dealer in funerals and headquarters for cemetery and medical college supplies fell on me.

I bade adieu to my family, rehearsed a part of "The Immortals" to work in a dying speech, wrote to Washington, sending in my resignation as United States Commissioner, and, having put on my new clothes, I went to this man, who carries with him a death record of those who have died at his hands, which looks like the advertised letter list of the Leadville Post-office.

I wondered afterward how I came to fly into the very jaws of death as I did, but I kept my piercing eye on the grave-yard monopolist till he quailed. I straightened up to my full height and taking a step ladder I went up and threw back my aurora borealis locks from the wide honest brow. If there is any feature I possess which excites my pardonable pride, it is my square open brow. If I had as much money, as I have brow, I would ride around the country on a special train, but I haven't. Year after year I am keeping over a larger and larger stock of shop-worn brow for which there is no demand.

I came away from the interview with this man greatly relieved. He was not carniverous as we had supposed. He was not grieving for a chance to bathe himself in gore. He was introducing a new kind of grease-spot eradicator, and he was suffering a good deal of mental anguish because he couldn't bring his sales up to fifty cents per day. California Mountain Drivers.

THE California ranchmen have wonderful aptitude for driving, and one sees some pretty good examples among the hills. The road down the mountain sides is entirely unguarded on the outer edge, and the descent in most places is precipitous. A balky horse, or a fractured wheel, or a slight carelessness in handling the reins, might easily send a carriage-load of people to destruction—and an awful destruction, too. The path is wide enough for one pair of wheels only, but at intervals it broadens so that teams may pass each other. The huge lumber teams which carry wood from the mills in the mountains to the yards in the valleys are especially hard to manage. Yet the drivers always seem easy and nonchalant. First there is a large four-wheeled oaken truck with a seat in front ten feet above the ground; behind it is another truck, somewhat shorter, but still enormously stout. These are fastened together and loaded with from ten to fifteen tons of freshly-sawn lumber—boards and joists. This mass is drawn by six or eight mules or horses, guided by reins and a prodigiously long whip. The first wagon has a powerful brake, worked by a long iron lever by the driver upon his seat. The driver is a man of nerve and courage. It will not do for him to take fright, even if in imminent danger, and he must know to a hair's breadth where he can go and where he cannot. But a beholder—ignorant of the danger that constantly surrounds him—would say that his work was simple, and that he managed matters with ease. True, it seems so. With his sinewy hands holding the reins with carelessness, his legs outstretched, one foot feeling the all-important brake, he jogs onward with his monster charge without trouble or concern; the bells upon the horses' breasts jingle a little tune; the great wheels crush the stones in the path; the load creaks like a ship's hull in a sudden gust; wild birds sweep down into hazy, sunny depths below; yet the driver seems to take no heed. But let a "scare" take place; let a herd of runaway cattle appear at a bend and set the horses wild, and then see what will happen. The day dreamer will become a giant of strength; he is up in a flash; he shortens his hold upon the reins, and feeling his wagon start up beneath him, places a foot of iron on the brake. The horses snort and rear and surge; the harnesses rattle, the dust arises, the load shrieks again, and the huge wheels turn fatally faster and faster. An instant may hurl the wagon down into the valley with its struggling train—a mad rush to the other side of the way may end all in one horrible plunge. Muscle, eye, brain, skill are then brought to work so splendidly together that the peril is averted, and the looker-on, who knows not the lay of the land, regards the teamster with profound respect thereafter.—San Francisco Argus.

Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. HOSTETTER'S

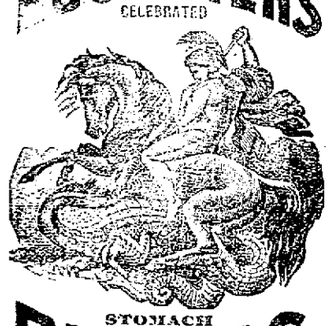
CELEBRATED



STOMACH BITTERS

There is no civilized nation in the Western Hemisphere in which the utility of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a tonic, corrective, and antibilious medicine, is not known and appreciated. While it is a medicine for all seasons and all climates, it is especially suited to the complaints generated by the weather, being the purest and best vegetable stimulant in the world. For sale by Druggists and Dealers, to whom apply for Hostetter's Almanac for 1881.

DAY'S

Kidney PAD

IS STRONGLY ENDORSED.

Rev. E. F. L. GAUSS, Galena, Ills., writes—"For over ten years I had been a great sufferer from pains in the small of the back and region of the Kidneys, which was most excruciating and at times almost insufferable. Doctoring brought no relief, and I was finally advised to go abroad and seek the climate of my youth. In Germany and Switzerland, eminent physicians, after close examination, declared my sufferings to arise from disease of the Kidneys, of long standing, and could do me no good. I was, however, benefited by the climate and consequently returned. No sooner had I been back and resumed my pastoral work, when the old trouble grew again so intense as to make life a burden. A few months ago I came in possession of one of Day's Kidney Pads, put it on, and the effects were truly wonderful. The pains at once grew less and are now, after wearing the second Pad, entirely gone, and there can be no doubt that I am entirely cured, as I write this some weeks after its use, and am strong and look again the very picture of health. I write this perfectly voluntarily, and it is dictated only by truth and gratitude. Indeed, I consider the Day Kidney Pad Co. God's agents and great benefactors of mankind. May all the suffering be helped as I have been is my earnest wish."

LARIMORE & DEAN, Druggists, Niles, Mich.—"30 years in business." "Day's Kidney Pad is having a large sale and gives better general satisfaction than any remedy we ever sold."

CASPER WEITZEL, Policeman, Lancaster, Pa.—"I have been a great sufferer from Kidney complaint, and after wearing your Pad 25 days I feel better than I have in 15 years."

Dr. A. J. STONER, Decatur, Ills.—"Your Pad is doing great good here. It sells every day and gives entire satisfaction."

For sale by druggists, or sent by mail (free of postage) on receipt of the price—Regular Pad $2.00; Special Pad extra size, $3.00; Children's, $1.50. Our book, "How a Life was Saved," giving the history of this new discovery and a large record of most remarkable cures sent free. Write for it. Address, DAY KIDNEY PAD CO., Toledo, O.

CAUTION. Owing to the many worthless imitations of Kidney Pads now seeking a sale on our reputation, we deem it due the afflicted to warn them. Ask for DAY'S KIDNEY PAD, and take no other.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

American Beef for England.

UNTIL within a few years past, scarce a pound of fresh beef or a single fat bullock was exported from America to Great Britain, as it had been thought, up to that period, these products could not be placed there in a fit condition for the consumption of the fastidious islanders. Moreover, for some time the value of meats of all kinds had been so near alike on both sides of the Atlantic as to preclude the idea of exportation at a profit. But prices then began to advance rapidly in Great Britain and the neighboring countries of Europe, from which she had long drawn ample supplies for her wants over and above her own productions, while a depression took place to some extent in America. This prompted a few of our enterprising dealers in fresh beef and fat bullocks to make the experiment of exportation thither. These, at first, owing to the imperfect refrigeration of the compartments on board ship for the preservation of fresh meat, and lack of comfortable accommodation for live cattle, together with some other causes, more often resulted in a loss than profit. But the pioneers in this business persevered with the accustomed American pluck, rapidly introducing one improvement after another, till the exportations increased during the past fiscal year, ending June 30, 1879, to 54,035,832 pounds of fresh beef, valued at $4,883,080; and 136,720 bullocks, valued at $8,379,200—the whole product being $13,262,280.

Had it not been for the British Orders in Council, prohibiting considerable importations of live cattle, on account of supposed disease, American exportations would have been much larger, and we have every reason to believe they will be soon doubled, if not trebled. They certainly will, if nothing untoward occurs in this new business. In fact, it promises so largely and profitably in the future, that ships are now fitting up expressly for the transportation of fresh meats and live animals of all domestic kinds, not only to the United Kingdom, but also to France, Belgium, Holland and Denmark, and in due time the exportation will probably be extended to other parts of Europe.

The introduction of fresh beef from America into England met at first with great opposition on the part of many there, and especially of the butchers, who, like the silversmiths of Ephesus of old, saw "their craft in danger." Provoking accounts of this have appeared in the English papers; but the following, from a correspondent of the London Times, being rather amusing, I copy it to show the American reader how he was treated by his butcher and grocer:

"Some time since large quantities of American beef began to be imported, just at a time when English beef was reaching almost famine prices. I know a family in this town, of good position, who, after much anxious thought, and weighing all the chances of being poisoned, etc., timorously resolved one day to try this American beef. Unfortunately the servants heard of the great experiment. The joint—a fine one—was duly seryed; the family ate and liked it. (They are still alive.) But would you believe it, sir, not one of the four servants would touch it! Let us not be too hard on the servants. I would not try it myself for more than a year after the first importations. Everybody knows that we can get as good a joint in New York as in London, but I feared the voyage might injure it.

"A few weeks ago we had undoubted evidence of our butcher sending us American beef charged at the price of English. I had paid him all winter elevenpence per pound all round; after which I went to American stores, and got similar joints at eightpence-halfpenny per pound. I had been charged fourteenpence per pound for best Wiltshire hams, when, in fact, the same were subsequently found at sevenpence per pound at American stores."

In addition to the above paltry trick of selling good American beef at the exorbitant price then ruling of English, the butchers resorted to the still more reprehensible one of selecting any which happened to be of an inferior quality, or slightly damaged on the voyage across the Atlantic, and offering such at lower prices, and as the best American. To put an end to the nefarious transactions, the importers decided on having public sales of their meat. This brought it directly to the knowledge of the people, who upon trial finding it equal to their own, a steadily increasing market sprung up for it, and now fresh American beef, mutton, pork and poultry sell as freely abroad, and at as high prices, as the choicest European.—A. B. Allen, in Harper's Magazine.

MY LITTLE WOMAN.

A HOMELY cottage, quaint and old,
Its thatch grown thick with green and gold
And wind-sow grasses;
Unchanged it stands in sun and rain,
And seldom through the quiet lane
A footstep passes.

Yet here my little woman dwelt,
And saw the shroud of winter melt
From meads and fallows;
And heard the yellow-hammer sing
A tiny welcome to the spring
From budding sallows.

She saw the early morning sky
Blush with a tender wild-rose dye
Above the larches;
And watched the crimson sunset hue,
Behind the summer plumes of rea
In woodland arches.

My little woman, gone away
To that far land which knows, they say,
No more sun-setting!
I wonder if her gentle soul,
Securely resting at the goal,
Has learnt forgetting?

My heart wakes up and cries in vain;
She gave me love, I gave her pain
While she was living;
I knew not when her spirit fled,
But those who stood beside her said
She died forgiving.

My dove has found a better rest,
And yet I love the empty nest
She left neglected;
I tread the very path she trod,
And ask—in her new home with God
Am I expected?

If it were but the Father's will
To let me know she loves me still,
This aching sorrow
Would turn to hope, and I could say,
Perchance she whispers day by day,
"He comes to-morrow."

I linger in the silent lane,
And high above the clover plain
The clouds are riven:
Across the fields she used to know
The light breaks, and the wind sighs low,
"Loved and forgiven."

HUMOROUS.

IT is a poor butcher who can't make spring lamb out of an old sheep.

"PAY as you go" is a rule, the application of which is most general on horse railroads.

"WILL the action lie?" inquires the anxious client. "Yes," replies the facetious attorney, "the action will lie if the witnesses will."

YES, Melancthon, you are correct. Base-ball is the oldest recreation on record. It was in Adam's inning that we all went out.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A CASE of domestic scandal was under discussion at a tea table. "Well, let us think the best of her that we can," said an elderly spinster. "Yes," said another, "and say the worst—that's the fashion."

THE author of "Nancy Lee" made $8,000 by the song, the owners of "My Grandfather's Clock" netted $11,500, the "Baby Mine" man counted up nearly $7,000, and yet honest and irreproachable citizens are toiling away for two dollars a day.—Detroit Free Press.

WITHOUT wishing to encourage the world in gabble, we may state that the goldenness of silence is overestimated. The mute, inglorious oyster is always getting into broils, stews and hot water.

WHEN ladies meet
They always greet
With kisses heard across the street.
But men, more mild,
Don't get so wild;
They meet and part when both have "smiled."

AN ingenious person has discovered that the three most forcible letters in our alphabet are N R G, the two which contain nothing are M T; that four express great corpulence, O B C T; that we are in a decline, D K; that four indicate exalted station, X L N C, and three excite our tears, yet, when pronounced together, are necessary to a good understanding—L E G.

"Now, look!" cried the gay auctioneer. "This carpet—one dollar I hear—
An 'alf—make it two—
Going—gone! ma'am, to you—
Dirt cheap—and you settle right here."

Her name was called out rather loud;
She blushed then, with eyes cyed by the crowd;
Two dollars she bid!
On the desk, quite afraid,
And felt of her bargain so proud.

How soon was her sweet pleasure marred:
For the auctioneer gazed at her hard:
"Indeed?" well, I'm blamed—
Fifty more," he exclaimed.
"You bid, ma'am, two dollars a yard."

—Oil City Derrick.

I WENT often to look at the collection of curiosities in Heidelberg Castle, and one day surprised the keeper of it with my German. I spoke entirely in that language. He was greatly interested, and after I had talked a while he said my German was very rare, possibly a 'unike,' and wanted to add it to his museum. If he had known what it cost me to acquire my art he would also have known that it would break any collector to buy it. Surely there is not another language that is so slipshod and systemless, and so slippery and elusive to the grasp. One is washed about in it, hither and thither, in the most helpless way, and when at last he thinks he has captured a rule which offers firm ground to take a rest on amid the general rage and turmoil of the parts of speech, he turns over the page and reads, 'Let the pupil make careful note of the following exceptions.' He runs his eye down and finds that there are more exceptions to the rule than instances of it. So overboard he goes again to hunt for another Ararat and to find another quicksand. German books are easy enough to read when you hold them before the looking-glass or stand on your head—so as to reverse the construction—but I think that to learn to read and understand a German newspaper is a thing which must always remain an impossibility to a foreigner."

—The Binghamton Republican has discovered that the separate blocks in the "15 block" puzzle may be placed in 1,207,674,368,000 positions, at each time leaving the required space of one. As it takes about the same number of years to do it, we shall not try it. We haven't so many years to spare, and cannot imagine how the editor of the Republican stole so much time from his other duties.—Norristown Herald.

MEAT RISSOLES.—Chop any kind of cold meat quite fine; crumb the same quantity of bread as you have meat; put a little of the fat of the meat in; season with salt and pepper and summer savory to taste; beat up one or two eggs, according as you need, and form your meat and bread into a thick paste with the eggs, then mold it into balls, and fry a light brown color.

THERE was an elephant that had been trained to play the piano with its trunk in a show. One day a new piano was bought for it, but no sooner had the elepant touched the keys than it burst into a flood of tears. "What ails you, Kiouni?" asked its keeper. The poor beast could only point to the ivory keys. Alas! they were made of the tusks of his mother.

BRIEFLETS.

—This is no soft snap.

—The Circuit Court will be in session to-morrow again.

—In crowding the fires, look out for defective flues.

—Justice Brooks is busy, to-day, listening to a civil case from Indian Ford.

—The officers had an easy Sunday of it, and the Police Court to-day seems sleepy.

—The cisterns got a drink Saturday night. The rain was good what there was of it, but the housewives yearn for more.

—The Mutual Improvement Club meet to-night to study "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream." Papers are expected from Miss Hatherell, Mr. Stearns, and Dr. Newman.

—The stationers are busy passing out small packages of paper to the school children. Examinations, this week, cause the demand, it being the last week of the present term, and then for a vacation.

—A beautiful oil painting executed by a Janesville lady, hangs in the window of King's book store, and is to be voted away at the coming fair of St. Patrick's church, which is to commence on the 20th inst.

—There was a narrow escape, yesterday, from a blaze, in a little house opposite St. Mary's Catholic church, caused by too hot a stove pipe. The flames were speedily squelched, without the use of engines.

—Mrs. and Mrs. N. B. Robinson, tender, through the columns of the Gazette, their hearty thanks to the employes of the Wisconsin Shoe Company for the beautiful and valuable presents received from them.

—The ice-men commenced putting in their stock of coolness, when the thaw commenced Saturday, fearing that the ice was going to lessen in thickness, but the change of yesterday has revived their hopes.

—The money order business of the postoffice was remarkably large, last week, there being 147 orders issued amounting to $1,877.60, and 112 orders paid, amounting to $2,165.50, making the total cash handled, $4,043.11.

—W. H. Main's house, corner of Josephine and Stoughton streets, in the Third ward, had a narrow escape from being burned, yesterday morning. A stovepipe passing through the roof was the cause of the incipient blaze, which was speedily subdued.

—Dr. Palmer, being absent from this city this week, has secured Dr. Carey, of Whitewater, to attend to his practice here. Dr. Carey was for some time in Dr. Palmer's office, and has many friends here, who are glad to have him here though it be only for a week.

—The report reaches this city of another smash-up on the Chicago & Northwestern road, it being the mixed train which runs from Rockford to Kenosha. The accident occurred near Genoa, and by it seven cars were ditched, and one brakeman was very seriously injured.

—Next Friday evening Litt & McFarlane have arranged for another attraction at the Opera house, it being the presentation of the famous drama "Davy Crockett," in which Frank A. Tannehill, supported by an excellent company, will appear. It promises to be an enjoyable entertainment, and the prices of tickets are within easy reach.

—Last Saturday Dr. Palmer examined and approved six applications for membership in the Mutual Protective Association. The Association seems to be thriving, and the increase in membership, and the steady growth of the Association, indicate that its plans of life insurance meet with the approval of those who examine them.

—The sale of tickets for the Bells of Corneville commenced, to-day, at Mosley's. The elaborate preparations made for presenting this charming opera, and the interest taken in it by home talent, ought to be warmly approved by a liberal patronage, and as it is to be given but two evenings, Monday and Tuesday, of next week, there will doubtless be full houses at both presentations.

—Next Friday evening the officers of the Grand Temple of Uniformed Patriarchs, I. O. O. F., expect to be here to institute Bower City Temple, No. 3, Uniformed Patriarchs. This feature of the Odd Fellows order is rather a new one, and bears about the same relationship as the Knights Templar bear to the Masonic order. The first organization was effected in Milwaukee about two years ago, Racine followed and now comes Janesville. It promises to be one of the best features of the order, and will doubtless become quite general.

—Despite the cold, Cannon's hall was well filled yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association, and the exercises were unusually interesting. After the opening services, Mr. Nesselroad, of Virginia, a telegraph student, read a well-written essay on the liquor traffic, and its influence. Miss Mary Hoskins read extracts from an able essay penned by the late Miss Goodell, on the subject "How to be Saved?" Mr. Bigelow gave a stirring ten minute talk to young men. Mrs. Millimore read extracts from an essay on the use of tobacco, and its effects. Father Cheney gave a brief talk and a song. Mr. Bliss also gave a brief talk. Mr. Follansbee sang "Rum's Rule." Miss Cora Roof, presided at the organ, and Messrs. Kent, Helms, and Hilderbrandt, assisted by a goodly number of singers furnished an abundance of good music, so that taken as a whole the meeting was one of the best yet held.

FULL FACTS.

The Details of the Railway Collision on the Northwestern Road—Where the Blame Lies—Those Who Were Injured.

The collision which occurred Saturday near Cary, still excites much talk in this community, though the first thrill of sensationalism has passed away. The account of the accident as given in Saturday's GAZETTE has been confirmed by later news, and some fresh details given, which will be eagerly read here, as so many of the employes and passengers are residents of the city.

It appears that the Geneva train was about two minutes behind time when it passed through Cary, and hence was really running on the time of the Janesville train, which was right behind it, and was also two or three minutes late. As the Geneva train does not stop at any station until it reaches Chicago, it therefore keeps out of the way of the Janesville train, and reaches Chicago twenty minutes earlier. Saturday morning after the Geneva train had pulled out of Cary about a mile and a half, the engineer, Frank Steward, noticed that something about his engine had given out. He was just about crossing the bridge, and seemingly without thinking of the train which was coming up in its rear, stopped his train, and found that the spring of the engine had broken. The conductor, John Brooks, finding the train slackening, hurried forward to ascertain the cause, and at once sent back a brakeman to flag the Janesville train. The brakeman did not get more than fifty feet from his own train, when the Janesville train came thundering along, and Tom King, the engineer, saw the train standing on the track just ahead of him. He promptly reversed his engine, put on the air brakes, threw open the sand box, and did all he could to stop his train, and then he and his fireman, Joseph Hierl, jumped.

It was too late, and the engine went crashing into the rear of the Geneva train, running fully one-third the way through the rear coach, smashing the car into kindling wood and making a frightful wreck. The passenger coach and baggage car, which with the engine made up the Geneva train, began to blaze up, and a terrible scene followed, but the passengers managed to crawl out of the burning wreck, and strangely enough no lives were lost.

The work of caring for the wounded and clearing the track followed. It was found that fewer were injured than was to have been expected. The main reason was that there were but few passengers on the Geneva train, the travel being light at this season of the year. Had it been in the summer there must have been a large loss of life, and many more injured.

Mrs. H. C. Maynard, wife of the Chicago manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, and Mrs. S. P. Colby, wife of a Chicago letter carrier, were the most seriously injured. Mrs. Maynard's face and hands were badly burned, as was also her left side, and there were internal injuries, of seemingly serious nature. She has been in delicate health for some years, and it is feared the shock may prove fatal. She had been spending the summer at Lake Geneva, and was returning from a visit there, greatly improved in health.

Mrs. Colby was bruised about the head and shoulders, but was able to give Mrs. Maynard some needed attention, until she was placed on the train to return home, when she sank prostrated from the nervous shock and exhaustion. She lost her satchel and portemonnaie, the latter containing $150. Her boy, who was with her, lost his hat, but escaped without a scratch.

Conductor Brooks, of the Geneva train, received a severe bruise and some cuts on the left hand.

Joe Leiter, son of L. Z. Leiter, of Chicago, was slightly bruised, and his tutor, Edgar Madden, was severely cut and scalded.

Mrs. J. Green, of Brighton, Wis., was injured about the hips. Among the other passengers on the Geneva train, more or less injured, were: H. Barrencheen, agent for Franz Falk; R. H. Winter, of New York; A. Workman, of New York; J. W. Stocker, of Logan, Iowa.

On the Janesville train there was a lively shaking up of passengers, but no one was injured, save by small bumps and slight scratches. Among the passengers from here, were: Henry A. Doty, Mrs. Thomas Lappin, Mrs. C. B. Conrad, Fred Putnam, Miss Lallie Foster, Mrs. Canary, and Miss Wright, who gave readings here, the night previous.

Engineer King, and the fireman escaped by jumping. The latter escaped uninjured, but the former was slightly jarred, and is to-day feeling some lameness as the result, but is around as usual.

All there was left of the Geneva train was the engine. The Janesville train had the platforms of its coaches crushed, and its engine robbed of its smoke-stack and cow-catcher, and the front of the boiler somewhat stove in.

The blame seems to be attached to the engineer of the Geneva train. It was a foggy morning, the track was slippery, the running time close, and the greatest caution should have been shown, but instead of that he stopped right in the face of an oncoming train, and that too when he was behind time. His engine was not disabled, a spring being the only trouble, and after the accident he was able to run his engine five miles, to Barrington. Had he, instead of stopping, slacked up and let a brakeman off to flag the Janesville train, and then pulled right along until at a safe distance to stop, no such accident would have occurred.

From several sources come words of praise for the prompt work shown by the officers of the road, and the train men, and the activity shown in providing for the comfort of the injured ones. And in these tributes of praise, the names of Conductor Rich and those of his train, are of frequent mention.

PERSONAL.

—Mrs. Liddell is among those reported as quite seriously ill.

—James R. Peterson is confined at home now by illness.

—Guy Wheeler's son is quite sick, suffering from nervous prostration.

—Levi P. Bliss has just returned from a two weeks' trip to the far North.

Lewis Wilbur, the janitor of the Central school building, is on the sick list.

—John Heath's boy who has been alarmingly sick with diphtheria, is considered to-day to be out of danger.

—William Alcott, of Spring Valley, was in the city to-day, enroute for Madison, whither he has been summoned as a member of the United States Grand Jury.

—Hon. G. H. Buckstaff, of Oshkosh, member-elect of the Legislature, was in the city to-day. He was elected by one of the largest majorities received by any candidate for the Legislature.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, of Chicago, who were called hither by the death of Miss Emily Kimball, left, this afternoon, for home again. Mr. Brown was for a long time in the express office, here, and both he and his wife have many friends and acquaintances in the city.

Samuel A. Hewitt, Monteray, Mich., writes that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cannot be beat by any medicine for coughs and colds, and for rheumatism, it works like a charm. It has been thoroughly tried in this place, and is in great demand.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Last evening the First Methodist church was filled with those called together by the announcement that memorial services would be held in memory of the late Miss Emily Kimball, who had been so long an active, zealous worker in that society. Above the pulpit platform appeared upon the wall the words wrought in evergreen, "Safe at Home," and a cross, about which were drapings of black, and the pulpit itself was also draped. Rev. Mr. Wells, the pastor, was unable to be present, having been detained in Whitewater, whither he was called to officiate at a funeral. His absence necessitated a change in the programme as arranged, and the burden of the service was quite unexpectedly thrown altogether upon Rev. O. A. Curtis, who only expected to occupy a portion of the time. Mr. Curtis conducted the usual opening services, and then gave an appropriate address. He spoke of her business-like, methodical, careful and prompt methods of working; her modesty and quietness; her frankness and bluntness, and her zeal as a worker, especially in the missionary cause. The address was closely listened to, and was a tender, honest tribute to the worthy worker, who has thus gone hence.

UGLY ACCIDENTS.

Christian Yeager, who is in the employ of Captain Ruger, met with a bad accident, Saturday. He was in the loft of the barn, when by some misstep, he fell, striking heavily across a rail, and receiving some very painful injuries. Dr. Judd was called, and an examination showed that no bones were broken, but that there were some rather serious internal injuries.

A son of Thomas Austin, while loading some hogs at the stock yards, received an ugly injury in a queer way. He grabbed one of the hogs by the ear, when the hog turned and set his teeth into the young man's hand, making an ugly wound, and splitting the palm of the hand up to between the thumb and first finger.

NOVEMBER NOTICE!

Our stock being complete in every department filled with every description of new goods, we are able to show and sell new goods at lower prices than any house in the West. We have in opening our new store determined not to put one cent into shoddy goods at any price, any goods shown by us will be the best quality at the prices named, for example:

No Underwear at 25c., but the best 50c. Underwear in the City.

The best Prints in the world at 7c., such as Merrimac, Cocheco, Pacific, Allen's, Simpson, Richmond and others.

No Canton Flannel at 6c., but a splendid article at 15 and 20c

No Table Linen at 20c., and 25c., but the Heaviest at 37 1-2c., 50c., 75c, and $1.00.

No Towels at 5c. each, but a Good Line at 15c., and 25c.

We cannot show a Cloak at $3.00 and $4 00, but examine our $5.00 Cloaks, good quality. Nothing shoddy, but first class stock in every thing. Our new store is well lighted, lots of room, and arranged in departments for each kind of goods.
